NEIGHBORHOOD COURT

Neighborhood Court is an alternative to Criminal Court.

At Neighborhood Court, a panel of citizens decides how to resolve the case.

Panelists are residents who volunteer to hear the cases.

The hearing is confidential and is not a Criminal court proceeding.

Going to Neighborhood Court is voluntary.

Neighborhood Court resolves cases quickly.

Neighborhood court has the potential to benefit participants.

Neighborhood Court has the potential to benefit communities and the criminal justice system.

Neighborhood Court is a restorative justice program initiated by the Yolo County District Attorney's office in cooperation with the Davis Police Department to address nonviolent and low level crimes through community-based solutions to swiftly redress the harm caused by these offenses outside of the traditional criminal justice system. The purpose of this program is to address criminal violations that impact the quality of life of our neighborhoods.

As a restorative justice program Neighborhood Court strengthens neighborhoods impacted by criminal activity in four ways:

- Restore Victim
- Restore Community
- Restore Offender
- Educate Offender
